Historical Note

The Arnold Arboretum traditionally has two main planting seasons: one in the spring and one in the fall, during which materials are planted and/or transferred to the main grounds from the Arboretum's nurseries, moved around or removed from the grounds, and checked for condition. The materials in this collection document these activities, which involved the Arboretum grounds crew, horticulturists, taxonomists, superintendents, and members of the Greenhouse and Curatorial Departments, and which span from 1932 to 2006. Donald Wyman \(1904-1993\) served as the Horticulturist of the Arnold Arboretum from 1935 until 1970, and was a driving force in documenting the arboretum's planting seasons. His successors included Gordon P. Dewolf, Jr. (Horticulturist, 1970-1976), Robert S. Hebb (Assistant Horticulturist, 1968-1974), Gary L. Koller (Supervisor of the Living Collections and then Manager of Horticulture, 1976-1998), and Stephen A. Spongberg (Assistant Curator and the Horticultural Taxonomist, 1970-1998). Spongberg revised the planting season documentation in fall 1991 to include seasonal Planting Bulletins, (a separate set of records which can be found in Records of the Living Collections: Planting Bulletins, 1991-, IV C-2.1). After Spongberg's retirement in 1998, Peter Del Tredici became the Director of Living Collections, and directed the Arboretum's planting seasons and plant siting between 1992 and 2004. He was assisted by Julie Coop (Manager of Horticulture, -2008). In 2007, Coop began working with Michael Dosmann, who was appointed the Director of Living Collections that year; they prepared Planting Bulletins and directed plant siting. After Coop left the Arboretum in 2008, Dosmann continued directing the plant siting and preparing Planting Bulletins with the assistance of the Arboretum's Manager of Horticulture.
