Celebrate Lilac Sunday at the Arnold Arboretum

BOSTON, MA— Be a part of a cherished Boston tradition—join us on May 11 from 10am to 3pm for the 115th celebration of Lilac Sunday at the Arnold Arboretum. Free and open to all on this and every day, the Arboretum showcases its premier collection of lilacs and welcomes spring with tours, family activities, and more. Due to limited parking along the Arboretum's perimeter, we strongly encourage the use of public transportation.

Lilac Sunday salutes spring at Boston's outdoor tree museum as the flowering season hits its stride, offering fun, free explorations for the entire family. The event features ongoing tours of the Arboretum's lilacs and other plant collections, as well as children's activities, a meditation station, dancers, chalk drawing artists, and picnicking on this day only. Visitors may also enjoy a host of self-guided tours, including a lilac tour, via the Arboretum website and its Expeditions app.

The tradition of Lilac Sunday began more than a century ago to highlight the Arboretum's beloved lilacs growing on Bussey Hill, a superb collection of more than 400 plants representing 173 different kinds of lilacs. For more information about lilacs and the Arboretum's world-class collection, visit the Arboretum website.

- What: Lilac Sunday at the Arnold Arboretum at Harvard University; see full event schedule.
- When: Activities from 10:00am to 3:00pm on May 11 (Mother's Day). The landscape is free and open to the public, dawn until dusk, year round. Picnicking allowed on this day only.
